HEARING THE FINGERS

Written and Directed by Manan Kathuria

Synopsis:

An interdisciplinary theatrical play which stages an aspiring filmmaker meeting a deaf and mute artist and how a documentary film comes to light, followed by the exhibition of the artist's work. From a tissue-paper to a canvas of life, a heart-warming conversation between the two on art, struggles, challenges, disability and ignorance in silence.

Director's Note:

Everyone is unique and has their voice. The play reflects upon the relationship of silence and art and slowly transitions from stage to screen and ends when the audience walks through Amit Vardhan's exhibition. It is one of a kind. The heartwarming conversation between two artists takes you through a journey of how one lives a life of dreams. It makes you selfless, grounded and surrounds you with a safe space. To understand human beings is a little tough, but it isn't something which can't happen if one tends to lend an ear and hear. To direct the play was a profound experience for me. It still gives me goosebumps and will always do.
