PREM PATR

Directed by Chinmaya Madan and Designed by Kathleen Kershaw

Synopsis:

How can love exist if you can't see or talk to your lover for years? Can food help you bring your family back together? Can we keep the child in us alive in this materialistic world? Can a mother let go of her daughter?

Prem Patr is a devised multisensory experience revolving around four different stories of love. The production aims at exploring new possibilities of presenting theatre to the audiences and breaking the boundaries. With all the stories based in India, the four stories intersect and take place simultaneously in the performance space launching a variety of sensory stimuluses for the audience like smell of the food being made by the street vendor, the texture of the letters being written by one of the lovers, the feel of the rain falling on stage that the child is enjoying or the projection of memories the mother has filmed throughout the years of her daughter. ? The show includes multiple multi-sensory elements such as live food cooking and serving to the audience, live cinema, physical movement, audience participation, audience interaction, projection, puppetry, and an audio story.
